

LANGUAGE WORKSHOP

A. Make a list of all the languages you speak and indicate how well you speak them.

The languages I know	How well do I know these languages?
	Simple phrases and single words	Can communicate quite freely on different subjects	Advanced communication in a large variety of areas

B. Why have you learnt these languages? How long have you studied them? When and with whom do you speak these languages?

C. Studying a language involves the study of five different skills – listening, reading, interaction, oral production and writing. Usually, we are not equally competent in all of these skills.

Discuss your English with a partner. Where are your strengths and weaknesses? Is it easier to read a text than to write one yourself? Do you find it more difficult to understand what is said on radio than in TV shows? If so, why? And what about interaction, is it easier than just listening or more demanding? Why or why not?

D. Write a text about your English where you reflect upon the following questions:

- What do I know already?
- What would I like to learn?
- Why do I want to learn this?
- How am I going to learn it?

Throughout the year you can go back to this text and add what you have learnt.

VOCABULARY

interaction – samhandling

When you talk with someone, you interact.